Introduction

The Copenhagen criteria for accessing the European Union, adopted in 1993 by the European Council, require stable government institutions that should be able to guarantee democracy, rule of law, human rights and protection of minorities. To promote the development of such institutions in pre-accession countries, integrity policies and anti-corruption activities are important conditions. In addition, issues of integrity and corruption need to be dealt with in order to realise the five principles of good governance in the EU, as described in the White Paper on European Governance: openness, participation, accountability, effectiveness and coherence. The training programme Integrity of Civil Servants discusses how to design, implement and enforce a policy to promote the integrity of civil servants, as a contribution to transparent and accountable government institutions.

Objectives

The training programme aims to increase understanding of the international and EU framework for integrity policy and the national context of the participants' countries. The course provides insight in the roles and responsibilities of the different actors in promoting integrity of civil servants. The seven building blocks of integrity will be discussed, as well as coherence of integrity policies with the overall financial and HR-policy. Examples from The Netherlands will be discussed and European organisations such as OLAF and GRECO will present their work in the field of anti-corruption. In addition, knowledge and skills to develop a sustainable policy for the promotion of integrity of civil servants at different government levels will be enhanced. Special attention will be paid to obstacles and dilemmas in the implementation process and how to overcome them.

Approach

The training programme will have a practical and interactive character. This is in line with the objective to share knowledge and strengthen the co-operation between the civil servants and magistrates of the participating countries.

Structure

The programme will stimulate much participant interaction and is built around three balanced, mutually supportive and integrated components, namely:

- Theory
- Practical skills
- Study visits

A social programme will facilitate network development between the participants from the various countries as well as between the participants and their Dutch counterparts.

On completion of the training, participants will:

- Have insight in the importance of integrity for well-functioning, transparent government institutions and for economic growth;
- Know how the Dutch policy for integrity of civil servants is shaped and organised;
- Be able to use the acquired knowledge and best practices as a source of inspiration for dealing with challenges related to integrity policies in their own countries;
- Be trained in the practical application of specific subjects and in a number of needed practical skills;
- Have had the opportunity to share knowledge and experiences;
- Have had the opportunity to create new professional cross-border networking relations.

Experts

The lead trainer of this course is Henk Bruning, who has broad experience as a trainer/consultant in the Netherlands and the target countries in the field of organisational management, personnel policy and integrity issues.

All contributors to the programme are carefully selected and have practical experience with designing and/or implementing integrity policies. They come from the European Union, the Council of Europe, the Netherlands Ministries of Home Affairs, Security and Justice, the Dutch police organisation, the Municipality of Amsterdam, Transparency International and academic institutions.
