

Summer Programme on International Sports Law: How to Play Football's Legal Game?

29 June - 3 July
2015
The Hague

Match-Fixing: Exploring the Dark Side of Football

Match-fixing is high on football's agenda, it has even been called a greater threat to football than doping. The football governing bodies are aware of this threat, though many think they could do more to tackle the issue. Thus, be it as a club manager, a member of a football governing body or a player's adviser you need to have a good understanding of this problem to be able to confront it if necessary. Our Summer Programme will ensure that you are able to accurately assess and efficiently manage match-fixing risks in practice.

The Format: Lecture

The Expert: Jack Anderson

Jack is a Professor of Law at Queen's University, Belfast and the Editor of the International Sports Law Journal. One of his main research interests is gambling-led corruption in sport. A Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators, Jack is a panel member on various national sports dispute resolution bodies such as Sports Resolutions (UK) and Just Sport Ireland. He has widely published in peer-reviewed journals on disciplinary and criminal matters in sport.
