

SUMMARY OF CONTENTS

Foreword – John Dugard	V
Table of Contents	IX
Abbreviations	XIX
Introduction – Carsten Stahn &amp; Larissa van den Herik Future perspectives on international criminal justice: Through the looking glass	1
Part I – The influence of scholars and practitioners on the development and conceptualization of international criminal law	9
Chapter 1 – Gerry Simpson ‘Satires of circumstance’: Some notes on war crimes trials and irony	11
Chapter 2 – Alette Smeulers &amp; Wouter Werner The Banality of Evil on trial	24
Chapter 3 – Harmen van der Wilt Why international criminal lawyers should read Mirjan Damaška	44
Chapter 4 – Tamàs Hoffmann The gentle humanizer of humanitarian law – Antonio Cassese and the creation of the customary law of non-international armed conflict	58
Chapter 5 – Christoph Burchard The international criminal legal process: Towards a realistic model of international criminal law in action	81
Part II – Theorizing international criminal justice	113
Chapter 6 – Darryl Robinson The two liberalisms of international criminal law	115
Chapter 7 – Kai Ambos International criminal law at the crossroads: From ad hoc imposition to a treaty-based universal system	161
Chapter 8 – Frédéric Mégret In search of the ‘vertical’: Towards an institutional theory of international criminal justice’s core	178
Part III – Re-assessing the balance between international and domestic jurisdiction	225
Chapter 9 – Kevin Jon Heller Situational gravity under the Rome Statute	227
Chapter 10 – Mark Osiel When law ‘expresses’ more than it cares to admit: Comments on Heller	254
Chapter 11 – Dawn Sedman Should the prosecution of ordinary crimes in domestic jurisdictions satisfy the complementarity principle?	259
Chapter 12 – Marta Valiñas Interpreting complementarity and interests of justice in the presence of restorative-based alternative forms of justice	267

Chapter 13 – Elizabeth Santalla
Universal jurisdiction and the prosecution of excluded asylum seekers	289
Part IV – De-individualizing international criminal law: Can abstract entities commit international crimes after all?	315
Chapter 14 – Scott Doucet
The Inter-American Court of Human Rights and aggravated state responsibility: Operationalizing the concept of state crime	317
Chapter 15 – Larissa van den Herik
Corporations as future subjects of the International Criminal Court: An exploration of the counterarguments and consequences	350
Chapter 16 – Dan Kuwali
Grey war zone? The question of contractual control of the privatization of warfare and the civilianization of the military	369
Chapter 17 – Materneau Chrispin
Holding private military corporations accountable for their crimes: The applicability of the commander/superior responsibility doctrine to crimes of PMCs	395
Part V – Crime definitions revisited	423
Chapter 18 – Astrid Reisinger
Defining the crime of aggression	425
Chapter 19 – Nicolaos Strapatsas
Complementarity and aggression: A ticking time bomb?	450
Chapter 20 – Michael E. Kurth
The recruitment and use of child soldiers: Some reflections on the prosecution of a new war crime	475
Part VI – System-criminality and the principle of personal fault: A balancing test in setting the appropriate standards for modes of liability	499
Chapter 21 – Gideon Boas
The difficulty with individual criminal responsibility in international criminal law	501
Chapter 22 – Héctor Olásolo Alonso
Current trends on modes of liability for genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes	520
Chapter 23 – Athanasios Chouliaras
From ‘conspiracy’ to ‘joint criminal enterprise’: In search of the organizational parameter	545
Part VII
Towards one international criminal procedure?	583
Chapter 24 – Göran Sluiter
Trends in the development of a unified law of international criminal procedure	585
Chapter 25 – Alexander Zahar
Witness memory and the manufacture of evidence at the international criminal tribunals	600
Chapter 26 – Liesbeth Zegveld
Remedies for war victims	611
Chapter 27 – Nino Tsereteli
Victim participation in ICC proceedings	625
Chapter 28 – Carsten Stahn
Arrest and surrender under the ICC Statute – A contextual reading	659
Index	687