Practicing UEFA's Financial Fair Play

Each year more than 200 football clubs take part in UEFA's European club competitions. To do so they are forced to abide with UEFA's Licensing and Financial Fair Play Regulations. In 2014, for the first time, high profile European clubs (PSG and Manchester City) faced sanctions after being found in breach of the FFP regulations. This has clearly demonstrated that FFP regulations are here to stay and will be rigorously enforced by UEFA. Anyone trying to get a foothold in the football industry will need a good grasp of these regulations. This year's ASSER International Sport Law Summer Programme will make sure that you do!

The Format: Lecture and Interactive Workshop

The Expert: Daniel Geey

Daniel is a practicing competition lawyer in England and the famous @footballLaw twitterer. He has published extensively on UEFA's Financial Fair Play rules and advises professional football clubs regarding their implementation. He is the ideal candidate to walk you through UEFA's FFP procedure with the practicalities of their implementation in mind.
