The Global War on Terror and Beyond

Prof. Richard English (University of St Andrews)

Historical overview leading up to the Global War on Terror (GWOT) and its aftermath. The presentation will also look into the effects of the concept's use and what kind of role it has played in the counter-terrorism debate. It will also address the question whether countries nowadays, through an expansion of the powers of security agencies, strong language and resort to repressive measures, are not falling (again) into the 'post 9/11' trap, which has caused the excesses as exemplified by the previous lecture.

ISIS for instance has been structurally looting artefacts, which has become one of its main sources of income. The presentation will analyse the legal rules addressing the protection of cultural heritage during armed conflict and will discuss how these can be implemented in practice.

This presentation will look specifically at the increasing use of armed drones in the context of counter-terrorism. The speaker will address the legal framework of drone operations, and will also discuss to what extent the use of armed drones is an effective counter-terrorism tool. Moreover, the speaker will look into cutting-edge topics on the counter-terrorism agenda: the position of EU member states on armed drones, the quest for transparency and accountability in armed drone use, and implications of the United States' recent release of a number of key documents in this regard.

14.45 – 15.00            Coffee & Tea Break

Mr. Sergei Boeke (Institute for Security and Global Affairs at Leiden University)

This session will explore some of the basic concepts of intelligence (including acquisition and analysis) in the fight against terrorism. How are foreign intelligence and domestic security interrelated, and what are the differences between the military and law enforcement paradigms? Why is it still difficult for intelligence agencies to share data with their national and international partners?

10.45 – 12.15            The Role of the Police in Countering Terrorism
Prof. dr. Cyrille Fijnaut (Tilburg University)

In this presentation, the speaker will go into the role of the police in countering terrorism. Issues that will be addressed are the role of the police in the collection of intelligence, the institutional cooperation between police forces and intelligence services at the level of the EU, the interdependence of criminal investigation and intelligence gathering, and the intrinsic connection between the gathering of intelligence/evidence and the operations of special police forces.

12.15 – 13.00            Lunch

In this presentation, the protection and use of witnesses in terrorism cases will be discussed. What is the importance of using witnesses in terrorism trials? Which types of witnesses and protective measures exist? Can anonymous witnesses be used and if so, how can this be reconciled with a right to a fair trial? How should evidence of anonymous witnesses be weighed and what is the experience of international tribunals on this topic?

Dr. Bibi van Ginkel (Clingendael Institute/ ICCT)
- In this presentation, the role of the UN, GCTF, CTED and other important international and regional players in countering terrorism will be addressed. How can the UN assist countries in prosecuting terrorists? What is the role of UN conventions and resolutions? What are currently the main issues at stake for the UN and other organisations? What are the push and pull factors? Is it possible to convince fighters-to-be not to go? How can local communities and civil society be engaged to counter violent extremism? How can resilient communities be built? In this context, the speaker will showcase a couple of ongoing projects in Tunisia and the city of Delft, the Netherlands.

- Following up on yesterday's session, this session will provide a more general introduction to possible measures in countering the FTFs threat, with a specific focus on the repressive dimension. Which are the legal frameworks at the international, regional and national level to counter FTFs? What is the role of UNSCR 2178 (2014) and the GCTF's Hague Marrakech Memorandum? Some attention will also be paid to travel restrictions and the withdrawal of passports and citizenships.

- Yet again following up on the general overview of the last session, this session will feature a Belgian federal prosecutor of the counter-terrorism section that dealt with the Sharia4Belgium case. She will examine in detail how to prosecute FTFs on the national plane. Which kinds of court procedures exist to try them? What are the legal and practical challenges involved in these cases? Who can be held responsible for FTF-related activities? Can prosecution be initiated before FTFs leave for the conflict or only after they have returned? Can recruiters or those who incite others to become FTF be held criminally responsible? Which laws are being used - existing domestic laws, terrorism legislation - or are new laws being drafted to criminalise the issue of FTFs? How can evidence be collected (on the internet)? Is it possible to prosecute a person who has allegedly died? And how do prosecutors deal with the interaction between international humanitarian law and national counter-terrorism law?

High Level Panel on “The Use of Administrative Measures in the Context of Foreign Terrorist Fighters”

How to handle suspected aspiring and returning FTFs is currently a highly debated topic in countries of origin, destination and transit. The decision whether and how to prosecute or apply administrative measures to these individuals is very complex and should take into account a variety of factors, such as the availability of sufficient evidence, the seriousness of the alleged crime(s) and the public interest to prosecute. During the past years, several governments have decided to apply administrative measures to FTFs in certain circumstances. These measures include, amongst other things, deprivation of nationality, travel bans, confiscation of travel documents, prevention of re-entry, freezing of funds and cancellation of social benefit payments. Are these measures proportional and what benchmarks should we apply when designing new legislation and policy? An expert panel will present the advantages and disadvantages of recently introduced administrative measures. This will be followed by a Q&A session with the audience. Marco de Swart, ICCT Senior Portfolio Manager, will open with a word of welcome and introduce the panellists, after which Tim Moloney Q.C. will speak on the UK use of Terrorism Prevention and Investigation Measures (TPIMs), followed by Professor René de Groot who will speak on deprivation of nationality for FTFs. Finally, Dr. Bérénice Boutin will discuss administrative measures from a French perspective. After these presentations, there is room for questions and answers.
