

Prisoners of the International Community

Denis Abels

Prisoners of the International Community

The Legal Position of Persons Detained at International Criminal Tribunals

T · M · C · A S S E R P R E S S

 Springer

Denis Abels
Department of Criminal Law
Faculty of Law
University of Amsterdam
Amsterdam
The Netherlands

ISBN 978-90-6704-887-3 ISBN 978-90-6704-888-0 (eBook)
DOI 10.1007/978-90-6704-888-0

Library of Congress Control Number: 2012944376

© T.M.C. ASSER PRESS, The Hague, The Netherlands, and the author 2012

Published by T.M.C. ASSER PRESS, The Hague, The Netherlands www.asserpress.nl
Produced and distributed for T.M.C. ASSER PRESS by Springer-Verlag Berlin Heidelberg

No part of this work may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, microfilming, recording or otherwise, without written permission from the Publisher, with the exception of any material supplied specifically for the purpose of being entered and executed on a computer system, for exclusive use by the purchaser of the work. The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

Printed on acid-free paper

Springer is part of Springer Science+Business Media (www.springer.com)

'It is dangerous to show man too often how much he resembles the beasts, without showing him his grandeur. And it is even more dangerous to show him too often his grandeur without also his baseness. It is more dangerous still to let him ignore both'.

Blaise Pascal¹

¹ Quoted in Mark Lilla, The Hidden Lesson of Montaigne, The New York Review of Books, Volume 58, Number 5, 24 March 2011, available at: <http://www.nybooks.com/issues/2011/mar/24/> (last visited by the author on 28 March 2011).

Foreword

It matters greatly how international criminal tribunals treat persons they detain, for ultimately such tribunals are acting on behalf of all humankind. The example that these tribunals set in how they deal with these detainees will therefore have major implications. Prison authorities worldwide may argue that they cannot be expected to do more for the detainees for whom they are responsible than the international community requires in respect of the detainees held by international tribunals.

Denis Abels's book examines the legal position that pertains in the detention facilities at international criminal tribunals. It is built on two strong pillars. First, it explains in meticulous detail how as a matter of general legal principle the international tribunals that are currently operating should treat their detainees. Secondly, and in equal detail, it describes what the current tribunals are specifically required to do, and are doing, for and with the detainees in their care.

The construction of both these pillars requires careful scholarship. The general standards on how detainees should be treated are not set out in a single binding legal source. Instead they have been developed in several different ways and at both international and regional levels. At both levels there are human rights courts and tribunals that interpret abstract human rights standards and apply them to places of detention; inspecting bodies that examine whether such standards are being implemented in practice; and instruments, such as the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners or the European Prison Rules, that do address conditions of detention directly but that suffer from the twin weaknesses of not being binding law and of only setting minimum standards specifying what should be done. Abels investigates all these sources of standards. He draws masterfully from them both what they individually prescribe - his account of the standards implicit in the European Convention of Human Rights alone would justify publication as a study in its own right - and then combines the various sources to establish what the overall approach to detention should be as well as what specific standards should be applied to various aspects of its implementation.

Building the second pillar requires a description of the current position. This is hard as the internal rules governing detention in the facilities attached to the international tribunals are relatively sketchy, having largely been developed post hoc by tribunals themselves. However, Abels supplements them by a very meticulous investigation of the pronouncements of the presidents of the tribunals or of individual judges on detention matters. He also examines the details of the administrative rulings and other communications on the subject of detention of the officials attached to the tribunals. This is an extraordinary work of synthesis. Nor is it as dry as it may sound, for Abels combines it cleverly with material gained from interviews with officials and in some instances with the detainees themselves. From these very diverse sources a rounded picture emerges of a nascent international detention system. It may have been set up without much thought, merely as a way of holding accused persons pending trial. However, it has ended up having to do much more, as the periods of detention have become much longer than envisaged, and as convicted detainees have ended up spending many months in these before they can finally be sent to serve their sentences in the prisons of states that volunteer to take them.

Having described so carefully and fully both the ‘ought’ and the ‘is’, Abels has a strong foundation for a sustained critique of the legal position of detainees in the existing system of detention. In this regard he is rightly critical of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in particular, where the tribunals make the regulations governing detention, administers them and interprets them judicially, for example when it judges disciplinary matters where the allegation is that the rules that it drafted itself have been infringed. The absence of the conventional division of powers between legislative, executive and adjudicative organs raises many problems and Abels’s proposed solution of an independent disciplinary adjudicator has much to commend it as a way of ensuring that detainees are treated impartially and fairly.

The true value of this book goes far beyond such specific reform suggestions, however. At its heart is a definitive account of a process where the need to manage a specialised area, detention facilities for international criminal tribunals, has generated rules and practices based on a large but inchoate body of principles. By bringing them together and systematising them in this volume into a statement of the legal position of detainees Denis Abels has done what institutional writers did in the nineteenth century before the principles of criminal law were codified, and more modern scholars, such as Horst Schüler-Springorum in Germany or Constantijn Kelk in the Netherlands, did prior to full legislation on national prison law in the late twentieth century. One may legitimately hope that this work will provide the basis for the principled codification of the law governing not only the detention facilities but also the prisons to which sentenced offenders are sent by international tribunals and, looking forward, the International Criminal Court in future.

Nottingham, Summer 2012

Dirk van Zyl Smit
Professor of Comparative and International Penal Law
University of Nottingham

Acknowledgments

In writing this work, I have received tremendous support from many different persons and institutions. I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to them. I am most grateful to the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO) for subsidising the project (NWO-Toptalent 2007, ‘Prisoners of the international community’). For planting the seed of writing this work, I am grateful to Göran Sluiter. I am indebted to him for his tremendous support over the past years. I would also like to thank Gerard de Jonge, for both his support and his many valuable comments and insights. I am also most grateful to Tom Blom, Miranda Boone, Yvonne Donders, Claus Kreß, Harmen van der Wilt and Dirk van Zyl Smit for their invaluable comments (and to Dirk in particular for writing the book’s Foreword). My visits to the international criminal tribunals and my conversations there with persons who actually apply, or “live”, the detention law described in this book have also been invaluable. The detainees and authorities of the ICTR, SCSL and ICTY have been very co-operative and have thereby made a significant contribution to this research. I would like to explicitly thank Adama Dieng and Everard O’Donnell for making my stay at Arusha a success. I would also like to thank the ICTR UNDF detention authorities and, in particular, Saido Guindo, the UNDF’s Commanding Officer. The authorities at the SCSL have also been very co-operative. I am particularly thankful to Binta Mansaray, the (then Acting-) Registrar and to Ray Cardinal, the Detention Facility’s Chief of Detention. The ICTY’s authorities have also been most helpful, in particular the Tribunal’s Registrar, John Hocking, and its Commanding Officer, David Kennedy. I would further like to thank the Faculty of Law of the University of Amsterdam and the Amsterdam Center for International Law for creating a welcoming and academically inspiring environment. Furthermore, it was a great pleasure for me to be able to work at the Criminal Law Department of the University of Amsterdam. Tom Blom, our head of the department, thank you for creating such a joyful environment. I would also like to thank my dear colleagues at the Oudemanhuispoort for their constant support. Annemieke van Verseveld, thank you for being my ‘dagelijks begeleider’ and such a wonderful neighbour. Kelly Pitcher, “my native speaker”, you are my hero! Thank you so much for scrutinising the manuscript and correcting my English! My friends Martine van Trigt and Koen Vriend, thank you for all the practical and mental support! I also wish to express my gratitude to Tjeerd Jansen S.J. and Theo van Drunen S.J. And to my dear parents: this work is lovingly dedicated to you.

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Detention at International Criminal Tribunals	1
1.2	Purpose of the Study	3
1.3	Scope of the Study and Definitions	4
1.4	Methodology	7
1.5	Structure of the Study	9
1.6	Use of Instruments and Case Law	10
 Part I Detention Law at International Criminal Tribunals: Sources and Principles
2	The Protection of Detained Persons under International Law	13
2.1	Introduction	13
2.2	International Developments	15
2.2.1	General Developments	15
2.2.2	The Prohibition of Torture and Other Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment	20
2.2.3	The United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Program and its Standard Setting Work	30
2.3	Regional Developments	45
2.3.1	General Developments	45
2.3.2	The Prohibition of Torture and Other Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment	59
2.4	Conclusion	65
3	The Legal Regimes Governing Detention at the International Criminal Tribunals	67
3.1	Introduction	67

3.2	The Institutions' Legal Frameworks	71
3.2.1	Statutes	71
3.2.2	Rules of Procedure and Evidence	76
3.2.3	Administrative Regulations Regarding Detention Matters	81
3.3	Exceptions to the Regular Detention Regimes	94
3.3.1	The Modification of Detention Conditions	94
3.3.2	The Prohibition or Regulation of Contact of Detainees with Other Persons	120
3.4	Applying Human Rights Law	134
3.4.1	The Applicability of International Human Rights Law	134
3.4.2	Sources of Law and the Tribunals' Practice	154
3.4.3	Difficulties in Applying Human Rights Law	161
3.5	Applying Soft-Law Penal Standards and Beyond	169
3.6	Conclusion	184
4	Principles of Law Governing Detention at International Criminal Tribunals	187
4.1	Introduction	187
4.2	Principles Defined	190
4.3	Principles of Law Governing Detention at International Criminal Tribunals	196
4.3.1	The Notion of 'Principles' As Employed By International Tribunals	196
4.3.2	Primary Principles: Respect for Human Dignity and the Rule of Law	200
4.3.3	A Selection of Secondary Principles	210
4.4	Conclusion	262
Part II	Detention Law at International Criminal Tribunals: Procedures
5	Making and Handling Complaints	267
5.1	Introduction	268
5.2	Complaints Procedures: Rationales and Legal Framework	270
5.2.1	Rationales	270
5.2.2	Legal Framework	276
5.3	Complaints Procedures at the International Criminal Tribunals	281
5.3.1	Making Complaints to the Person in Charge of the Day-to-Day Management of the Facility	281
5.3.2	Making Complaints to the Registrar	292

5.3.3	Making Complaints to the President/Presidency	312
5.3.4	Evaluation	324
5.4	Medical Complaints.	332
5.4.1	Making Complaints About Medical Care	332
5.4.2	Evaluation	350
5.5	Making Complaints to the Inspectorate	354
5.5.1	Complaining to the Inspectorate at International Criminal Tribunals	354
5.5.2	Evaluation	367
5.6	Making complaints to Trial and Appeals Chambers	373
5.6.1	Detained Accused Persons' Complaints About Intramural Matters to Trial and Appeals Chambers	373
5.6.2	Evaluation	385
5.7	Conclusion	386
5.7.1	An Independent Complaints Adjudicator	386
5.7.2	Complaints About Medical Care	388
5.7.3	Legal Assistance in Complaints Procedures	389
5.7.4	Inspections	389
6	Discipline.	391
6.1	Introduction	391
6.2	Prison Discipline: Theoretical Underpinnings and Legal Framework	392
6.2.1	Theoretical Underpinnings	392
6.2.2	Legal Framework	397
6.3	Discipline at the International Criminal Tribunals' Detention Facilities	412
6.3.1	Discipline at the Various Tribunals	412
6.3.2	Evaluation	436
6.4	Conclusion	443
7	The Designation of States for the Enforcement of Sentences	445
7.1	Introduction	445
7.2	The Designation of States for the Enforcement of Sentences	447
7.2.1	International Penal Standards	447
7.2.2	General Observations.	449
7.2.3	The Tribunals' Designation Procedures	464
7.3	Evaluation	501
7.3.1	The Need for an Independent and Impartial Appeals Adjudicator in Designation Procedures	501
7.3.2	Establishing an International Prison.	504

7.3.3	Inter-State Cooperation on the Transfer of Prisoners and the Tribunals' Designation Regimes Compared	506
7.3.4	The Timing of the SCSL Convicts' Transfer to Rwanda.	508
7.3.5	The Treatment of International Prisoners as Foreign Prisoners	509
7.3.6	Transparency	515
7.3.7	A Lack of Willing States	516
7.4	Conclusion	517

Part III Detention Law at International Criminal Tribunals: Conditions of Detention

8	Contact with the Outside World	521
8.1	Introduction	521
8.2	Contact with Family and Friends.	525
8.2.1	Contact with Family and Friends: Rationales and Legal Requirements	525
8.2.2	Contact with Family and Friends at the Various Tribunals.	554
8.2.3	Evaluation	651
8.3	Contact with Counsel.	664
8.3.1	Contact with Counsel: Rationales and Legal Framework	664
8.3.2	Contact With Counsel at the Various Tribunals	676
8.3.3	Evaluation	715
8.4	Contact With the Media	721
8.4.1	Contact With the Media: Rationales and Legal Framework	721
8.4.2	Contact With the Media at the Various Tribunals	730
8.4.3	Evaluation	754
8.5	Conclusion	757
9	Concluding Remarks and Recommendations	761
9.1	Introduction	761
9.2	Conclusions	763
9.2.1	The Detention Law of the International Criminal Tribunals	763
9.2.2	Free and Confidential Communications with Counsel: A Rule of Customary International Law	764
9.2.3	Disciplinary Punishment: Solitary Confinement and Reduction of Diet	765

9.2.4	Inter-State Co-Operation on the Transfer of Prisoners and the Tribunals' Designation Regimes Compared	765
9.2.5	UNDU Detainees' Contact with the Media.	766
9.3	Recommendations	767
9.3.1	The Need for an Independent and Impartial Adjudicator in Complaints Proceedings	767
9.3.2	The Need for an Independent and Impartial Appeals Adjudicator in Disciplinary Proceedings	769
9.3.3	The Need for an Independent and Impartial Appeals Adjudicator in Designation Procedures	771
9.3.4	Inspections.	772
9.3.5	The Treatment of International Prisoners as Foreign Prisoners	773
9.3.6	Accessibility of Regulations and Detention Orders Governing Detainees' Contact with the Outside World	773
9.3.7	The Foreseeability and Necessity of Infringements on Substantial Rights of Detainees	774
9.3.8	Detainees' Communications with the Inspectorate.	775
9.3.9	Financial Assistance for Family Visits.	776
	Official Documents and Resolutions	779
	Table of Cases	797
	References	835

Abbreviations

A. Ch.	Appeals Chamber
ACHPR	African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights
ACHR	American Convention on Human Rights
ACommHPR	African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights
CAT	Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment
CoE	Council of Europe
CPT	European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment
ECCC	Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia
ECHR	European Convention on Human Rights
ECommHR	European Commission of Human Rights
ECtHR	European Court of Human Rights
EPR	European Prison Rules
HRC	Human Rights Committee
I-ACtHR	Inter-American Court of Human Rights
ICC	International Criminal Court
ICCPR	International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights
ICESCR	International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights
ICRC	International Committee of the Red Cross
ICTR	International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda
ICTY	International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia
OAS	Organization of American States
OPCAT	Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment
OTP	Office of the Prosecutor
Pres.	President
P.-T. Ch.	Pre-Trial Chamber

P.-T. J.	Pre-Trial Judge
RoC	Regulations of the Court (ICC)
RoR	Regulations of the Registry (ICC)
RPE	Rules of Procedure and Evidence
RSJ	Raad voor Strafrechtstoepassing en Jeugdbescherming
SCSL	Special Court for Sierra Leone
SMR	United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners
SPT	Subcommittee on the Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment
STL	Special Tribunal for Lebanon
T. Ch.	Trial Chamber
UDHR	Universal Declaration of Human Rights
U.N.	United Nations
U.N. Basic Principles	United Nations Basic Principles for the Treatment of Prisoners
U.N. Body of Principles	United Nations Body of Principles for the Protection of All Persons under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment
UNDU	United Nations Detention Unit (ICTY)
UNDF	United Nations Detention Facility (ICTR)