

SUMMARY OF CONTENTS

Table of Contents		VII
Abbreviations		XV
One	Introduction – Ronald Leenes, Bert-Jaap Koops and Paul De Hert	1
1.1.	Background: developments in technology	1
1.2.	A comparative study	3
1.3.	Scope and research question	4
1.4.	Background: the Koekkoek report of 2000	5
Two	Constitutional Rights and New Technologies in Belgium – Els Kindt, Eva Lievens, Elenis Kosta, Thomas Leys and Paul De Hert	11
2.1.	Introduction	11
2.2.	History of digital constitutional rights	12
2.3.	Changes in the constitutional system	18
2.4.	Privacy-related rights	21
2.5.	Communication-related rights	34
2.6.	Other and new constitutional rights	43
2.7.	Conclusion	48
Three	Constitutional Rights and New Technologies in Canada – Jason M. Young	57
3.1.	Introduction	57
3.2.	History of digital constitutional rights	57
3.3.	Changes in the constitutional system	62
3.4.	Privacy-related rights	63
3.5.	Communication-related rights	71
3.6.	Conclusion	88
Four	Constitutional Rights and New Technologies in France – Fanny Coudert, Anne Debet and Paul De Hert	95
4.1.	Introduction	95
4.2.	History of digital constitutional rights	98
4.3.	Changes in the constitutional system	101
4.4.	Privacy-related rights	105
4.5.	Communication-related rights	116
4.6.	Other and new constitutional rights	130
4.7.	Conclusion	132
Five	Constitutional Rights and New Technologies in Germany – Thomas Hoeren and Anselm Rodenhausen	137
5.1.	Introduction	137
5.2.	History of digital constitutional rights and changes in the constitutional system	138

5.3.	Privacy-related rights	138
5.4.	Communication-related rights	150
5.5.	Conclusion	155
Six	Constitutional Rights and New Technologies in the Netherlands – Bert-Jaap Koops and Marga Groothuis	159
6.1.	Introduction	159
6.2.	History of digital constitutional rights	160
6.3.	Changes in the constitutional system	163
6.4.	Privacy-related rights	164
6.5.	Communication-related rights	176
6.6.	Other and new constitutional rights	185
6.7.	Conclusion	190
Seven	Constitutional Rights and New Technologies in Sweden – Cecilia Magnusson Sjöberg	199
7.1.	Introduction	199
7.2.	History of digital constitutional rights	201
7.3.	Changes in the constitutional system	202
7.4.	Privacy-related rights	203
7.5.	Communication-related rights	210
7.6.	Other constitutional rights	215
7.7.	Conclusion	221
Eight	Constitutional Rights and New Technologies in the United States – Susan W. Brenner	225
8.1.	Introduction	225
8.2.	History and scope of digital constitutional rights	226
8.3.	Changes in the constitutional system	229
8.4.	Privacy-related rights	230
8.5.	Communication-related rights	246
8.6.	Other and new constitutional rights	258
8.7.	Conclusion	259
Nine	Conclusions and Recommendations – Paul De Hert, Bert-Jaap Koops and Ronald Leenes	265
9.1.	General	265
9.2.	General constitutional characteristics and developments	265
9.3.	Privacy	269
9.4.	Communication-related rights	276
9.5.	Other and new constitutional rights	281
9.6.	Conclusion	284
	Appendix: Participants to the Workshop Constitutional Rights and New Technologies, The Hague, 1 December 2006	287
	About the authors	289
	Index	293